

Xceleration Volleyball Club has been a wonderful experience for our family - not just for highly competitive volleyball and college recruiting opportunities, but also for community and friendship. The leadership is people we respect and admire. Paul Harrison and Jim Ross were selfless and tireless advocates for our daughter Molly during the recruiting process. They helped her to hone in and define her priorities, then provided phenomenal support, availing themselves of their extensive college coach network and guiding her, as she contacted coaches and they contacted her.

Then, there's Andy and Jeremy, the Xcel 18 Blue coaches. Molly, Doug and I think so very highly of Andy Schroeder as a mentor, coach and human being. He has teamed up with the equally amazing Jeremy Swann to very effectively co-lead and coach, in a way that models teamwork and empowerment. They are very skilled teachers, and they care so much about their players and invest in them in a profound way. I'm not the only one who feels this way - for testimony from former players now competing at the college level, check out the Xceleration page on Facebook, particularly in regards to Andy being one of the finalists for National Club Coach of the Year (July 16, 2015).

These are the people in charge of Xceleration Volleyball Club, and they are great leaders. They will always be a part of our lives, not just because they were great coaches and college recruiting mentors, but because of who they are as people.

Go Xcel!
